

Dear colleagues,

Dear board members,

Dear delegates,

I am Dr. Canberk Djan MESELI, currently working in Ireland, in the Mater Misericordiae University Hospital Emergency Department as registrar in Emergency Medicine. The MMUH is a tertiary hospital in the north side of Dublin, serving as national trauma centre.

I have been residing in the Republic of Ireland for last six years and before relocating to Ireland, I have finished my internship in Europe and had worked in hospitals in Europe as well as Republic of Turkey.

Throughout my career, I have gained extensive experiences in Emergency Ultrasound, Military and Civilian Search and Rescue, teaching ACLS and ATLS, leading simulation courses for medical students, interns and junior trainees, performing and teaching POCUS, trauma ultrasound, Echo Guided Life Support.

Having an interest in Toxicology, I am an active member in Toxicology Section in EUSEM for last two years. Also, my background of teaching simulation led me to join the organising committee of SimWars in EUSEM for last 2 years.

As an active member of EUSEM, in 2020, I was elected as the Congress Track Lead of Young Emergency Medicine Doctors section for upcoming EUSEM 2021 Congress in Lisbon. During this role, I have had the opportunity to build a network amongst doctors all over the world. It has given me close-up look the issues and built an insight to tackle them successfully. It was a tough, as well as very beneficial year for YEMD section as I have represented the YEMD Board in EUSEM Congress Organising Committee.

Now it is the time for me to amalgamate the experiences and networking that I have built with my current role, and apply for the role of Chair of Young Emergency Medicine Doctors Section in EUSEM.

I believe as an elected chair, I will promote YEMD in various aspects with our valuable board members and represent all delegates in EUSEM committees throughout next two years.

I undoubtedly think, Young Emergency Medicine Section should be the umbrella organisation and a new home for all Emergency Medicine trainees across Europe, and by doing this, we should aim to elevate our successful position to a brighter future while addressing the common issues we have been facing throughout the years with education, fellowship, representation, curriculum and more.

To move forward, we must communicate better, listen more, and streamline decision making. We can work collaboratively with all stakeholders to find common ground and create win-win solutions.

But I need your partnership.

I ask for your vote for the elections and I look forward to earning your trust.

Dr. Canberk Djan MESELI
Mater Misericordiae University Hospital
Dublin, Ireland