

Candidate Eligibility for Part B:

The European Board Examination of Emergency Medicine (EBEEM) will provide evidence that a successful candidate is able to function as an independent emergency practitioner in any country in Europe.

Eligibility depends on providing evidence of experience and training in emergency medicine. If a formal training programme is not available in the country of practice, evidence of personal development in matters relating to emergency medicine and evidence of competence in all aspects of the European curriculum should be provided.

Please be sure that you've read the eligibility requirements before you submit your application. Candidates who are submitting their application but not eligible will be charged by €100 pre-registration cost.

The essential criteria for eligibility for the clinical examination (Part B) is as follows:

To have passed the EBEEM Part A Exam within the previous four years.

And one of the following:

1. To be at least at the end of a minimum 5-year training programme in Emergency Medicine that is following the European curriculum
2. To be actively working full time in an emergency department for at least 5 years and recognised by the National Government of the country as a specialist in Emergency Medicine
3. For physicians working in countries where the specialty of Emergency Medicine does not yet exist: to be working in Emergency Medicine for at least 5 years and to provide evidence in a portfolio of competence in the full range of the curriculum. This may consist of a combination of logbook cases, evidence of continuing professional development (courses, e-learning) or evidence of training delivered in a range of topics, audit projects, etc
